Newsletter Friday 12th September 2014

We have enjoyed a fabulous second week as pupils settle into our school and routines. I have been impressed by the calm and purposeful environment and how smart pupils look in their uniforms. It really has been a fabulous start to the term. We are ready to learn and focussed!

I extend a warm welcome on behalf of governors and staff to a new member of our team this week, Mrs Fitch. She is our new Business Manager and is based in our school office. I am sure she will soon get to know all of your names so please say hello.

Casual Lunchtime Supervisors needed

We are looking to appoint two relief lunchtime supervisors to join our school team. If you are interested in applying for the post or would like further information, please contact Mrs Leverton, our Senior Midday Supervisor via our school office.

Polite notice

Staff at school work very hard to ensure that we meet the needs of all pupils and work in partnership with parents. We are a listening school so please share with us your worries or concerns so that we can seek to resolve them quickly, no matter how small you feel they may be.

Our school is a professional environment. We are role models for our pupils and we actively promote the highest standards of behaviour. Therefore, we will not tolerate any form of abusive behaviour towards staff and politely request that you speak to staff with courtesy.

Please support us in promoting a safe and courteous environment for our pupils to learn.

Music Camp

Mrs Hart and five Yr5 children have had a fantastic two days at Ilam Hall taking part in the annual Music Camp. We spent two days learning to read music and play either the baritone or trumpet. On the last day we played two pieces of music as part of a large orchestra. Both Mrs Hart and the children found the experience inspiring.

Keeping up with the children in English/Literacy

Glenbrook Primary School and New College Nottingham have jointly planned a new family learning course starting on the 30th September. This course aims to help parents support their children improving their English skills. If you are interested in learning more, please look out for our letter next week.

Glenbrook Primary is committed to safeguarding and promoting the welfare of children and young people.
